Gray Matters is a private mental health practice specializing in QEEG brain mapping and neurofeedback. Our group is comprised of several licensed professionals including therapists, social workers, and medical doctors using cutting edge technology and integrative approaches for the best patient care. We serve clients of all ages for a wide range of challenges including (but not limited to) ADHD, concussion, anxiety, and depression.

In addition to patient care, Gray Matters collaborates with other leading clinicians in the field, providing mentoring and consultation services for their practices. We are also involved in research, using developing EEG technologies to demonstrate the efficacy of QEEG and neurofeedback. This is a rare opportunity to join a collaborative practice working at the cutting edge QEEG and neurofeedback.

Responsibilities:

We are looking for a highly motivated individual to train as a full-time neurofeedback clinician, or for an existing clinician to hone their skills in our practice. The successful candidate must have a background in psychology, a keen interest in neuroscience and be able to work with patients of all ages. This position also requires an ability to handle administrative work such as scheduling and billing.

Qualifications:

The successful candidate will receive a unique and valuable training from the region's leading center for neurofeedback and QEEG, including BCIA board certification (if candidate does is not already certified). They must be highly organized and very comfortable with both people and technology. They must be able to work independently, self-motivated, and creatively collaborate with growth and marketing strategies.

Compensation and Benefits:

Salary and benefits are well above market rates.
